I love animals, I have 3 rescued cats, each with a whole story that makes them specials, I also enjoy helping others and being useful. At the moment, I have no plans on having children, being honest I had never the idea of being a donor until a friend told me about that and her experience... Giving up to something that can fill of love to other family, that would be my biggest satisfaction.

I have two brothers, I am the older sister, my brother Ali is a year younger than me, he is a super happy and funny guy, he always has something funny to say. He lives his life to the fullest, today he is married with two beautiful children that are my greatest love, he is very committed with his family and is super creative and curious. When he was a little boy he managed to disassemble every electric appliance just to know how it worked, he ended ruining them all because he did not know how to re assemble it. With the years passing he studied electronics and started to fix all he can including the electronics from cars, he is super smart and it is very sweet to see how the thing that he destroyed being curious now at days are they passion and his professional job.

Manuel is my little brother, he is the youngest, spoiled for everyone in the family, as a child very curious and indiscreet, starving on knowledge and world, there were not any conversation that you could finish because he always had a "why" to ask until you have no more answers, I remember one day our aunt gave him 4 books, one called Why, other called What, Where and

When. The books had thousands of answers, He read them all in a record time and then he did not ask anymore instead now he spends his days telling "Do you know that...". We tell him the indiscreet of the family because he does not save anything, he says everything because is the way he sees it, he is not the one who hide what he thinks or feels that is why I think he is the most honest in the family. He had always been autodidact, he reads and learns very quickly, when we have our first computer we just teach him how to turn it on and search on the internet, now at days he is an IT expert, he studied physics and business but also knows mechanics, electrics, accounting, etc. He does so many things and if he does not know, he investigates and learn about it, never hold the idea that something cannot be done, there is nothing impossible to him... They are my two endless love and besides I am the older sister I will always be their spoiled sister, I love them.
